Guide to the Bendigo Health Collection

WHAT IS THE BENDIGO HEALTH COLLECTION?

There are three-hundred-and-forty individual volumes across forty-one series in the Bendigo Health collection. All series are open access with a small number of records closed due to privacy or conservation reasons. The first records were produced in 1856 and the latest records in 2018. This is the first consignment of records transferred from Bendigo Health to the Public Record Office Victoria. Records include, among others, patient registers and case notes, minutes (a record of business dealt with at meetings) and reports made to the managing committees. A second consignment is currently in the process of being transferred. There is no estimated time for this second collection to be released at this stage.

WHAT IS BENDIGO HEALTH?

The Bendigo Gold District General Hospital and the Bendigo Benevolent Asylum were the first two agencies within this series to be established. All other agencies included in this collection are ancillary services run under the auspices of these two agencies. The Hospital and Asylum also underwent several name changes until they were brought together as Bendigo Health Care Group in 1995. Between the auxiliary groups, name changes and mergers, the collection is formed of records from fifteen individual agencies. A timeline showing this evolution can be found below and will help you navigate to the appropriate agency. At different times, some ancillary agencies had a reach in either service or patient admission far beyond Bendigo, including Mildura, Swan Hill, Echuca and Gisborne.

HOW CAN I ACCESS THIS COLLECTION?

All open access records can be ordered through the PROV online catalogue for viewing at the Bendigo Reading Room (only on Bendigo Regional Archive Centre open days). The records cannot be viewed at the Victorian Archive Centre, the Eureka Centre or the Geelong Heritage Centre Reading Rooms, and copies cannot be ordered. Private search agents, as listed on the PROV website, may be engaged to view and record items if you are not able to visit the Bendigo Reading Room or arrange your own proxy.
